

Now Consultians is an independent IT service company, that develops integral solutions for its clients' IT and process maps. As Austria's biggest Atlassian partner with its head office in Vienna, the team consisting of experienced employees from the technical and managerial department guarantee for optimizing processes for medium-sized companies, major companies, and global corporations.

Since its establishment, the enterprise sets its focus in consulting and realization matters on Jira, Confluence, and other software solutions by Atlassian. The whole range of Atlassian's application like project and process management, software development and testing, as well as error management & support, risk management and knowledge management are realized for their clients both in a professional and in a technical way.

Thanks to its well-founded technological expertise, experience concerning the enterprises' processes and requirements as well as the necessary know-how concerning the professional implementation, Now Consultians is currently not only Atlassian's biggest Solution Partner, but can also offer its clients the most extensive solution portfolio in this segment.

The Atlassian Platinum Status Partner's consulting team consists of certified Atlassian experts with many years of well-founded experience with the implementation and functionality of their products. The employees give their clients advice for choosing suitable solutions for their business processes and support them with their license purchases, configuration, and integration into the existing infrastructure. The education of their clients' customer service staff is a part of their range of services, as well as the development of client-specific add-ons and adjustments to the Atlassian environments.

Additionally, clients are supported – in close cooperation with their partners – in matters of information security, the productive operation of their SAP environment as well as agile software development.